Less time to take the heat out of pastry making!

The cool-down plate utilizes "heat exchange," or the flow of temperature from a higher temperature to a lower temperature. When food is placed on the plate, the plate takes the heat from the food and dissipates it into the air, speeding up the time it takes for the food to reach room temperature.

Can also be used to remove rough heat from lunchboxes.

Stylish slate style.

Environmental Responses

Interior building materials mainly composed of natural materials.

Moiss main ingredients:
vermiculite, silica sand, pulp, slaked lime.

It is a building material made in Japan from natural minerals, mainly vermiculite and silica sand.

Like diatomaceous earth, it absorbs and expels moisture, making it a popular material for bath mats and drainage plates in recent years.

It is also characterized by its fast water absorption speed and dry surface.

*No asbestos is used in Moiss.
